Football changes girls' lives in rural Kenya

“We can do it” is the slogan of an organization in Kenya called “Moving the Goalposts”. It uses football to increase self-confidence in girls in Kenya and aims for nothing less than changes in the society. The sound of girls playing football and clapping wildly when they score goals is not a sound often heard in rural Kenya. But here in the Kilifi district, north of the city of Mombasa, it has become fairly common. In this region, around 3,000 girls play football.

Margaret Belewa said: “Yesterday, on a dusty pitch in the village of Sokoke, 22 girls were playing in a training session, half in blue shirts, and half in red ones. Many were barefoot. The weather was very hot, but the girls were constantly in motion, these girls were learning a lot more than just how to pass, kick and score: they were learning how to think in new ways, ways that were unusual for young women in this part of the world”

"It is about a teenage girl realizing her goals in life, making her own decisions," Margaret Belewa, program manager of the Moving the Goalposts project said. "Most of the time, those decisions are made by the parents or by the husband. Now, can we help them so that they can take control of their life? Moving the Goalposts (MTG) aims to empower girls and young women in Kilifi, one of the poorest districts in Kenya, through football.
